

Dear John,

I find that I have some concerns about our marriage that I clearly must discuss with you. On the event of our upcoming boNd, it is plain that our particular colleagues will be most definitely displeased. Thus we need to ensure that interference from alum cannot engender misfortune for our event. I did invite my old friend under a pact of the utmost secrecy. He's a most trustworthy colleague - Mr. RYan has circumspection - yet I fear he nonetheless waffles between love for me & an allegiance to the state. And our contracts must be considered, since declaring all situations in the Rider void is a risk that cannot be boUrne. Briefings were sent and should cover most problems, but an absolutely secret event? Unlikely. Away from such serious business, who exactly is your best man? That boy is completely inappropriate. At least have him in slacks before aunt Agatha arrives. And what is the name he has chosen to call himself? It's zipper, jaGger, something unseemly. He is too smiley and cannot be the appropriate choice. In any case, I suppose I should try and be kind. Also regarding the upcoming occasion, have you any thought as to ceremony location? Especially regarding my previously stated concerns? I do have my preferences, but I would be pleased to hear your thoughts on this matter. I will search for your words soon.

Love Jane.
